Toast For Chrome

A new chrome extension that allows you to keep your sessions. Traditionally, many people use a drop-down menu or a full-page list to store different frequently-used items. It is still possible to use such a system, but at the same time, these problems might arise: 1) You have to fill the menu with many items in order to make it accessible, so that you can avoid large screen sizes. 2) You have to keep the list up-to-date. In order to overcome these problems, the idea of an always-updated notebook is born. In this post, I show you a simple method for creating an always-updated list of tasks. What is an always-updated notebook? An always-updated notebook is a list of things you want to do, as well as a calendar, often accessible on the web. And the concept of an always-updated notebook is to keep it updated at all times. Creating an always-updated notebook Step 1: Start a list of tasks As I mentioned in my article, I used the Notes Chrome Extension, which allows you to create lists of things and to add due dates. Just create a list with any name and add your tasks. If you're using the Classic Version of Chrome, you'll need to add a timestamp, as well as an icon and a badge. With the version for modern browsers, you can simply use a label for your list, and a color will be automatically assigned to each task. Step 2: Add due dates After you have created the list of tasks, the next step is to add the due dates. To do this, click on a task and click on "+". Now, a second window will open, where you can add due dates. Here is what it looks like: Step 3: Create an icon If you don't want to add any icons to your list, here is what you can do: Add the link of the tasks you want to add, and then click on "Add to list". As you can see, this will add the icon to your notebook. It's that simple. The icon of the

KeyMacro is a tool that lets you record any keystroke you make, then replay that keystroke again later. It's a powerful tool when recording text, but works for any kind of keystrokes. Usage: Copy the text you want to record, e.g.: Enter a long series of numbers to fill out a form Type a search query into a search engine Copy a portion of code from a JavaScript file Cut and paste some code from the clipboard Add any text to a text file Write some code to format and clean a specific paragraph Using the keyboard shortcut ctrl+shift+c, you can save the current open page to a file. Here is a tutorial on how to create and execute a macro to take a screenshot of the active tab of your Chrome browser. For Java, JavaScript, HTML5 and CSS programmers, Chrome Scribe is an extension that generates snippets of code from a site's source code. For Mac users, Tweetie is a multi-tab, easy-to-use Twitter client that lets you follow multiple Twitter accounts on one computer. Track those who're worth the time RescueTime is an interesting app that is designed to monitor what you do and how much time you spend on doing it. It is not designed to pressure you into tracking everything you do - rather, it's designed to help you track your time on a day-to-day basis, and recommend changes to your lifestyle that can improve your efficiency. Essentially, it consists of three main tools. First, RescueTime is an app that you download. It then monitors everything you do on your computer and reports back your efficiency (based on comparisons with a group of other users). Second, RescueTime also generates reports that you can send to a number of other RescueTime users. This allows you to compare your efficiency with friends and other people like you. Finally, RescueTime also has a website that allows you to control your data. You can view reports from your past (and, if you wish, compare your efficiency with friends), and you can also set goals for your efficiency. You can also pay to analyze your RescueTime reports in more detail. This lets you compare your efficiency with others and find out why you're wasting time. The key difference to keep in mind is that RescueTime is designed to offer you suggestions that can help you improve your life 2edc1e01e8

Takes the hassle out of managing a lot of open tabs. Gives you a list of all your open tabs and you can save them as a new session. What is an expression journal? What is an expression journal? In other words, what is a journal of spontaneous thoughts and feelings? Here are the different definitions that one can find online: * An accumulation of spontaneous thoughts, which may not necessarily be related. * A journal in which you record a train of thoughts, either as they pass through your mind or as you try to figure them out. * A record of one's feelings and a "picture" of the self. * A diary which is kept for personal purposes, the thoughts and feelings which one experiences. * A form of self-analysis, both in technique and content. * The daily record of one's experiences; also the record of certain experiences, usually events in one's life. In a nutshell, an expression journal is a diary of one's thoughts and feelings. It is a great way to de-stress, and you can start a journal to note your thoughts as they occur or to make yourself analyse how you're feeling. Here are some practical examples of expression journaling: - Any thought that arises out of your experience in the world, such as any negative or positive thoughts. - Any thought that arises out of any experience you're going through. - Any emotion or feeling you're experiencing. - A list of the thoughts and feelings you've been experiencing. Here are the three ways you can start a journal of your thoughts and feelings: - Sitting down and writing in a diary. - Keep a notebook close to you and write notes when you have any thought or feeling. - Write in a notebook and keep a few minutes at a time. Mostly people use journals to express their thoughts and feelings. Some people also keep a journal to help them grow and be able to be better at handling various things in their lives. What is a Thought Journal? A thought journal is a diary of the thoughts that you've had throughout your life. It is the way in which you record the thoughts that have been happening in your mind, the way in which you gain new insights and learn from your past. What is an Emotional Journal? An emotional journal is a journal of the feelings that you'
